Diane Pierce, coordinator of the digital photo program, has taught both traditional and digital forms of photography at De Anza College since 1997. She has taught beginning, intermediate and advance courses in black-and-white photography, experimental and non-traditional photographic methods, history of photography, and most recently digital imaging. Her work and teaching are inspired by contemporary issues which cross boundaries in a variety of mediums. An active member of the photographic community, Pierce has exhibited her work widely, and is represented in the collections of the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, the Bibliotheque National in Paris, and the de Saisset Museum at Santa Clara University. She received a Master of Fine Arts degree from Mills College in Oakland.
